

ED&I and Dignity at Work Guidance

© 2018 City of Glasgow College

Charity Number: SC0 36198

Table of Contents

1. Prohibited Conduct under the Equality Act 2010	3
2. Direct Discrimination	3
3. Indirect Discrimination.....	5
4. Discrimination Arising from a Disability.....	6
5. Harassment Related to a Protected Characteristic	6
6. Sexual Harassment.....	7
7. Racially Aggravated Harassment.....	9
8. Wider Harassment, including Stalking.....	9
9. Victimisation	10
10. Bullying.....	11
11. Hate Crime	12
12. Exemptions and Exceptions.....	13
13. Consequences.....	15

1. Prohibited Conduct under the Equality Act 2010

1.1. The following types of prohibited conduct are detailed in the Equality Act 2010:

- Direct discrimination.
- Indirect discrimination.
- Discrimination arising from a disability.
- Harassment related to a protected characteristic.
- Sexual harassment.
- Racially aggravated harassment.
- Stalking.
- Victimisation.
- Bullying.
- Hate crimes.

1.2. No minimum length of continuous employment is necessary for a discrimination claim to be made to an employment tribunal. Protection starts from when a role is advertised through to the last day of employment and beyond to include references.

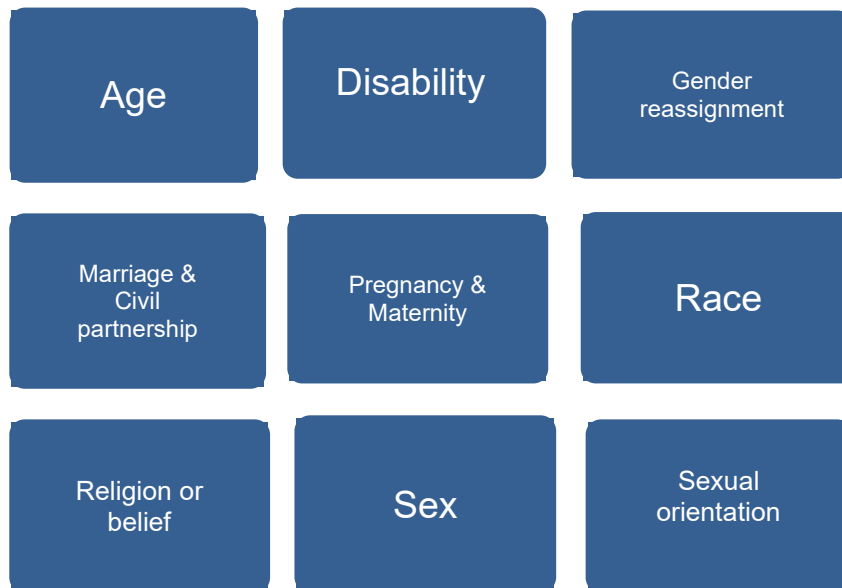

2. Direct Discrimination

2.1. Direct Discrimination occurs when a person is treated less favourably directly as follows:

- Ordinary direct discrimination - because of a protected characteristic they possess.
- Direct discrimination by association - because of a protected characteristic of someone they are connected to, such as a friend, family member or colleague.
- Direct discrimination by perception - because of a protected characteristic they are thought to have, regardless of whether this perception by others is correct or not.

2.2. The relevant protected characteristics are:

2.3. Direct discrimination is generally unlawful. However, it may be lawful in certain circumstances (See Section 12 – Exemptions and Exceptions).

2.4. All forms of direct discrimination could involve:

- a decision not to employ someone,
- to dismiss them,
- withhold training or promotion,
- lead to poorer terms and conditions or,
- deny contractual benefits because of a protected characteristic.

2.5. In general, to decide whether an employer has treated a worker with a protected characteristic “less favourably”, a comparison must be made with how they have treated other workers (or would have treated them in similar circumstances) who do not share that protected characteristic.

2.6. If the employer’s treatment of the worker puts the worker at a clear disadvantage compared with other workers, then it is likely that the treatment will be deemed less favourable.

3. Indirect Discrimination

- 3.1. Indirect discrimination is usually less obvious than direct discrimination and can often be unintended.
- 3.2. Indirect discrimination occurs where a provision, criterion, or practice (PCP) is applied equally to a group of staff or job applicants, but has (or will have) the effect of putting those who share a certain protected characteristics at a particular disadvantage when compared to others without the characteristics in the group, and the employer is unable to justify it.
- 3.3. As such, indirect discrimination applies to all protected characteristics apart from pregnancy and maternity (although, in pregnancy and maternity situations, indirect sex discrimination may apply).
- 3.4. A member of staff or job applicant claiming indirect discrimination must show how they have been, or could be, personally disadvantaged.
- 3.5. To demonstrate indirect discrimination, a comparison between workers with the protected characteristic and those without it is required.
- 3.6. They must also show how the application of the PCP has or might disproportionately disadvantage other staff or job candidates with the same protected characteristic.
- 3.7. The Act does not define a PCP. However, in the workplace, the term is most likely to include an employer's policies, procedures, rules and requirements, whether written down or not. Examples might include recruitment selection criteria, contractual benefits or a redundancy scoring matrix.
- 3.8. In some limited circumstances, indirect discrimination may be justified if it is "a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim", in other words "objective justification" (See Section 12).
- 3.9. However, it is very unlikely an employer would be able to justify discrimination arising from a disability if the unfavourable treatment could have been prevented by a reasonable adjustment.

4. Discrimination Arising from a Disability

- 4.1. Under the Equality Act, protection is also provided for disabled persons where:
- An employer treats the disabled person unfavourably and,
 - This treatment is because of something arising as a consequence of the disabled person's disability, for example, a tendency to make spelling mistakes arising from dyslexia and,
 - The employer cannot show that this treatment is a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim.
- 4.2. This applies unless the employer does not know, and could not reasonably be expected to know, that the person has the disability.
- 4.3. Unlike direct and indirect discrimination, an assessment of the disadvantages experienced by the disabled staff member compared to a non-disabled staff member is not required. It is only necessary to demonstrate that the unfavourable treatment is because of something arising in consequence of the disability.
- 4.4. At an employment tribunal, a claim of discrimination arising from disability would succeed if the employer was unable to objectively justify the unfavourable treatment on the basis of a valid and non-discriminatory reason.

5. Harassment Related to a Protected Characteristic

- 5.1. This is defined as “unwanted conduct related to a relevant protected characteristic” which has the “purpose or effect of violating an individual’s dignity, or creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment for that individual”.
- 5.2. Harassment takes many forms and:
- Includes nicknames, threats, jokes, “banter”, gossip, inappropriate questions, exclusionary behaviour, insults or unwanted physical contact.
 - Can be verbal, written or physical.

- Can be a single incident or persistent behaviour.
- Can be directed towards one or more individuals, by one or more people.

5.3. Harassment related to a protected characteristic can be:

- Ageist - because of, or focusing on, age.
- Disablist - because of, or focusing on, disability.
- Homophobic, biphobic or transphobic - because of, or focusing on, sexual orientation or a person's gender identity or expression.
- Racist - due to a person's race, colour, nationality (including citizenship), ethnicity or ethnic or national origins.
- Religion or religious beliefs - because of, or focusing on, religious faith or beliefs.
- Sexist - because of, or focusing on, a person's sex.

6. Sexual Harassment

6.1. Sexual harassment occurs when a person engages in unwanted behaviour "of a sexual nature", and the conduct has the purpose or effect of:

- Violating a person's dignity and/or,
- Creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment for the person.

6.2. "Of a sexual nature" can cover verbal, non-verbal or physical conduct including unwelcome sexual advances, inappropriate touching, sexual assault, sexual jokes, the display of pornographic material or sending emails with content of a sexual nature.

6.3. Employers must take reasonable measures to not only prevent sexual harassment by their own workers, but by external third parties, such as clients or customers.

Features of Harassment

- 6.4. In relation to harassment, the word “unwanted” means “unwelcome” or “uninvited”. It is not necessary for the individual(s) to say that they object to the behaviour for it to be unwanted.
- 6.5. Harassment is based on the recipient’s perception of the unwanted behaviour rather than that of the harasser, and whether it is reasonable for the recipient to feel that way.
- 6.6. For harassment related to a protected characteristic, it is also not necessary for the individual(s) to have a particular protected characteristic themselves. Instead, they could be associated with someone else who does (discrimination by association) or be wrongly perceived as having a particular protected characteristic (discrimination by perception).
- 6.7. Harassment related to a protected characteristic can also apply to staff who witness harassment and that have a negative impact on their dignity at work or the working environment, irrespective of whether they share the protected characteristics of the employee who is being harassed.
- 6.8. Differences in attitude or culture can mean that what is perceived as harassment by one person may not seem so by another. In such circumstances, the perpetrator may not fully understand the impact of their behaviour. The defining feature, however, is that the behaviour is unwanted.
- 6.9. Many forms of behaviour may constitute harassment. Although not intended to be exhaustive, these include:
- Threatened or actual physical contact ranging from touching to serious assault.
 - Verbal and written communication through lewd, offensive and inappropriate jokes, remarks, “banter”, gossip, slander, insults, threats, emails, use of social media or excluding staff on the basis of relevant protected characteristics (harassment related to a protected characteristic), of a sexual nature (sexual harassment) or in a wider sense (harassment and/or stalking).

- Visual displays of posters, images, graffiti, slogans, obscene gestures, flags, bunting or any other offensive material (which may include inappropriate screensavers, social media and desktop wallpaper).

7. Racially Aggravated Harassment

7.1 The Criminal Law \(Consolidation\) \(Scotland\) Act 1995 defines racially aggravated harassment as being where a person pursues a racially aggravated course of conduct which amounts to harassment of a person and:

- Is intended to amount to harassment of that person or,
- Occurs in circumstances where it would appear to a reasonable person that it would amount to harassment of that person or,
- Acts in a manner which is racially aggravated and which causes, or is intended to cause, a person alarm or distress.

7.2 A course of conduct or an action is racially aggravated if:

- Immediately before, during or immediately after carrying out the course of conduct or action the offender demonstrates malice or ill-will towards the person affected based on that person's membership (or presumed membership or association) of a racial group or,
- The course of conduct or action is motivated (wholly or partly) by malice and ill-will towards members of a racial group based on their membership of that group.

7.3 On conviction the guilty person may be liable to a statutory fine or imprisonment for up to 6 months, or both.

8. Wider Harassment, including Stalking

8.1 In a wider sense, Section 2 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 \(PHA 1997\) is used to cover the "causing alarm or distress" offence, and Section 4 "putting people in fear of violence" offences.

8.2 Although harassment is not specifically defined in the PHA 1997, it can include repeated attempts to impose unwanted communications and contact upon an individual in a manner that could be expected to cause distress or fear in any reasonable person.

- 8.3 Harassment of an individual can also occur when a person is harassing others connected with the targeted individual, knowing that this behaviour will affect their target as well as the other people that the person is directing their actions towards. This is known as “stalking by proxy”. Family members, friends and employees of the recipient may be subjected to this.
- 8.4 The Protection of Freedoms Act 2012 created new offences of stalking and sets out examples of acts which, in particular circumstances, are associated with stalking. Examples include following a person, watching or spying on them, or forcing contact with the individual through any means, including social media.
- 8.5 The effect of such behaviour is to curtail a target’s freedom, leaving them feeling that they constantly have to be careful.

9. Victimisation

- 9.1. Victimisation occurs when a staff member experiences what the law terms as “detriment”, something that causes disadvantage, damage, harm or loss because of one or more of the following:
 - Making an allegation of discrimination.
 - Supporting a complaint of discrimination.
 - Giving evidence relating to a complaint about discrimination.
 - Raising a grievance concerning equality or discrimination.
 - Doing anything else for the purposes of (or in connection with) the Equality Act 2010.
- 9.2. Victimisation may also occur because an employee is suspected of doing one or more of these things.
- 9.3. A member of staff is protected under the Act if they make, or support, an allegation of victimisation in good faith – even if the information of evidence they give proves to be inaccurate. However, an employee is not protected if they give, or support, information or evidence in bad faith – in other words maliciously.

10. Bullying

Definition

- 10.1. Bullying is not specifically defined in law. However, ACAS defines bullying as “offensive, intimidating, malicious or insulting behaviour, an abuse or misuse of power through means that undermine, humiliates, or causes physical or emotional harm to someone.”
- 10.2. In this sense, bullying is more open and less specific than harassment as it is not explicitly grounded on protected characteristics.
- 10.3. Bullying incidents may not seem significant when taken in isolation. However, it is important to recognise that there may be a cumulative effect and each incident is in effect building on the last.

Features of Bullying

- 10.4. The focus of bullying can take many forms. Although not intended to be exhaustive, bullying can relate to:
 - Clothing and appearance.
 - Voice and mannerisms.
 - Behaviours and other mental characteristics.
- 10.5. In summary, bullying relates to behaviours which have the intention of hurting another person or causing distress.
- 10.6. General bullying can take many forms. Although not intended to be exhaustive, these include:
 - Emotional - being unfriendly, excluding or tormenting, including hiding possessions, or threatening gestures.

- Physical - pushing, kicking, hitting, punching or any use of violence.
- Cyber - misuse of email, internet chat rooms, text messaging, telephone calls or associated technologies, including cameras.

10.7. Bullying of subordinates by managers can take many forms. Although not intended to be exhaustive, these include:

- Deliberately imposing grossly excessive or unachievable workloads or impossible deadlines to make life difficult for a particular employee.
- Repeated unfair criticism or destructive and negative criticism that focuses on blame rather than future improvement.
- Criticising the individual in front of colleagues.
- Unfairly blocking promotion and/or development opportunities.
- Excessive monitoring of a particular employee's work without good reason.
- Ordering a particular employee to work below their level of ability, or to perform mundane or demeaning tasks, for no proper reason.
- Removing an employee's responsibility without consultation and for no proper reason.
- Threatening an employee with dismissal.

11. Hate Crime

11.1. The Scottish Government defines Hate Crime as crime committed against a person or property that is motivated by "malice or ill-will towards an identifiable social group".

11.2. In Scotland, hate crimes are crimes motivated by prejudice based on:

- Age.
- Disability.
- Race.
- Religion.

- Sexual orientation.
 - Transgender identity.
 - Variations in sex characteristics.
- 11.3. The motivation of the perpetrator is the key factor in defining a hate crime.
- 11.4. Hate Crimes can take a number of forms. Although not intended to be exhaustive, these include:
- Physical assault.
 - Damage to property, including graffiti, arson, vandalism.
 - Fly tipping or dumping rubbish at someone's door.
 - Putting dangerous materials through a letterbox.
 - Intimidating or threatening behaviour including obscene calls or gestures.
 - Deliberate dog fouling.
 - Offensive literature, including letters, leaflets, posters.
 - Verbal abuse or insults including name-calling.
 - Online bullying and abuse.
 - Emotional, psychological and financial abuse including threats, blackmail and extortion.
 - Murder.

12. Exemptions and Exceptions

Objective Justification

- 12.1. Objective justification provides a defence for applying a policy that would otherwise be unlawful indirect discrimination. It also provides a defence for using an age-based rule or practice that would otherwise be direct age discrimination.
- 12.2. To rely on the “objective justification” defence, the employer or service provider must show that its policy (or age-based rule) was for a good reason – that is, “a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim”.

12.3. In attempting to demonstrate “a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim”, an employer or service provider must show:

- There is a legitimate aim, such as a good business reason, but employers should note that cost alone is unlikely to be considered sufficient and,
- The actions are proportionate, appropriate and necessary.

Occupational Requirements

12.4. In certain and rare circumstances, it may be lawful for an employer to specify that applicants for a job must have a particular protected characteristic under the Equality Act. In law, this approach is known as an “occupational requirement”.

12.5. Examples might include specifying a practising Catholic to work as a Chaplain in a Catholic school, or specifying that an actor for a film role needs to be a young woman.

12.6. However, it is not enough for an employer to simply decide they would prefer to employ someone who has a particular protected characteristic. The requirement must:

- Be crucial to the post, and not just one of several important factors and,
- Relate to the nature of the job and,
- Be “a proportionate means of achieving a legitimate aim”. If there is any reasonable and less discriminatory way of achieving the same aim, it is unlikely that the employer could claim an occupational requirement.

12.7. To be a genuine occupational requirement, all three conditions must be met.

Positive Action

- 12.8. Under the Equality Act, an employer can adopt “positive action” measures to help staff and job applicants it reasonably thinks:
- Are at a disadvantage because of a protected characteristic and/or,
 - Have specific needs connected to a protected characteristic and/or,
 - Are under-represented in the organisation, or whose participation in the organisation is disproportionately low, because of a protected characteristic.
- 12.9. An employer must be able to show evidence that any positive action is reasonably considered and will not discriminate against others.
- 12.10. There is no legal requirement for an employer to take - or consider taking - positive action if it does not wish to do so.
- 12.11. It remains good practice - and is sound - to distinguish between candidates based entirely on their qualifications, attributes and ability to do the job, rather than a protected characteristic.

13. Consequences

- 13.1. Regardless of the outcome of College investigations, civil or criminal action may be brought by members of staff.
- 13.2. Serious incidents could result in civil offences under the:
- Equality Act 2010.
 - Health & Safety at Work Act 1974.
 - Human Rights Act 1998.
 - Protection from Harassment Act 1997.
- 13.3. Serious incidents could result in criminal offences, including:
- Racially-aggravated harassment under The Criminal Law \(Consolidation\) \(Scotland\) Act 1995.
 - Offences under Hate Crime Legislation.

- Preventing Sexual Harassment in the Workplace.

13.4. Bullying, harassment, victimisation or discrimination also violates the College Code of Conduct as well as its Values and expected behaviours, having a significant impact on the organisation as a whole. The College could also be at risk from potential damage to its reputation, as an employer of choice and place of study.